Arms Balance Seen Shifting Against Israel

Conviction Is Growing Among U.S. Officials

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (NYT) A growing number of senior administration officials now privately conclude that recent movements of Soviet-manufactured surfaceto-air missiles toward the Suez Canal have shifted the military balance in the canal zone to the disadvantage of Israel.

They differ only on how much the new development might in-crease the rate of Israeli aircraft losses should fighting resume along the canal.

In an effort to mltigate this new situation ann to improve deteriorating relations between the United States and Israel, officials here are studying the possibility of providing Israel with sensors and reconnaissance devices.

These devices include small ground radars, night vision de-vices, acoustic and seismic antiinfiltration eensors, and sirborne infrared scanners and side-looking radars.

While American analysts are not of one mind on this, one of them suggested that substantial Israeli aircraft losses in any resumption of hostilities might force Israel to shift her strategy

The highest point reached by the President during the current year was 63 percent approval, recorded in mid-January. His low point was 53 percent, in late March.

Effect en Hoose Races What is the effect of the President's popularity on the congressional race? To what extent is there a "rub-off"?

To try to shed some light on these questions, the popularity of each President at the heginning of the campaign in the last six congressional offyear elections has been compared with the House seat gain or loss in the November elec-

This analysis reveals a relationship between presidential popularity at the beginning of congressional campaigns in early September and seat losses, although the evidence is more dramatic in some years than

Evidence gained since 1946 indicates that when a President's approval rating is high -that is, in the 60s-the seat loss for the party in control of the White House tends to be much less than the norm, which is 34 seats for the last six offyear contests.

On the other hand, when the President's popularity in early September is low—that is, in the 30s or 40s-the seat loss tends to be greater than the norm. In fact, the greatest seat loss (55) was recorded in 1946 when President Harry S. Truman'a early campaign rating was only 32 percent.

Normal Loss Seen Based solely on this evidence. the GOP would seem to be headed for something approaching a normal seat loss in the House this year. However, it is vitally important to bear in mind that many other key factors must be taken into account, including the course of world events.

The year 1950 is a good example of the impact of events in the closing days of a congressional campaign. Mr. Truman's low popularity rating of 43 percent approval, recorded in early September of that year. should have contributed to a larger than normal seat loss in that fall's elections. The loss for the Democrats of 29 seats, however, was actually only slightly under the norm for an off-year election.

The likely explanation lies in the fact that the election that year came only a few days after a series of military victories in the Korean War, culminating in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's successful drive to the Manchurian border. Hopes were high

Last week the fanatic logic of a small guerrilla band, the most militant of the Palestinian commando groups consecrated to the recovery of their lost homeland, imposed on four Western governments-and on Israel-a new kind of crisis in which the lives of hundreds of hostages and the safety of international air travel were interwoven with the issue of war and peace in the Middle East. Two great Western jetliners-then, as of Wednesday, threestood on a sunbaked desert plateau 25 miles outside Amman, the fabulous latest haul of the Popular Front's hijack veterans, while representatives of the ragged guerrillas ringing the planes palavered on an international level on their threat to blow up the planes together with their passengers and

Everything Soured

Then, after moving their human cargo of some 400 passengers to Amman and nearby towns in batches, and finally freeing all but 35 men (Israeli, British, Swiss, West German and American) and five Israeli women, the guerrillas blew up the three aircraft 13 hours before their own p.m. Saturday-for acceptance of their terms. It was their "first warning": the lives of the remaining hostages, a spokesman emphasized, were still in their hands.

Powerless-for fear of jeonardizing those lives—to do anything except edge up its Mediterranean fleet and its NATO air strength for possible evacuation moves, Washington followed the bizarre situation with unbelieving eyes. Officials could not remember when a diplomatic initiative as promising as the U.S. Mideast peace move of a month ago had soured so quickly. Everything that could have gone wrong did.

First, the Russians apparently had done what the Nixon administration had hard-headedly concluded they would not do -permit if not abet an Egyptian buildup of Soviet missiles in just as impassionedly as U.S. diplomats feared it would.

The Israelis decided last Sunday to boycott the peace parleys until the missiles were removed. What else might they do about the Egyptian and Soviet-manned batteries that the United States seemed in no position, diplomatic, political or military, to "roll back"?

Final Burden

On the already foundering Mideast peace project the hi-jackings fell like a final burden. The guerrillas' bargaining terms appeared to be aimed at splitting off to 2 Israeli hostages from the other -assengers, whom the Front, oposed to release in ex-change for the release of seven Palestinian guerrillas held in Western Europe.

The price for Israel appeared to be the release of a large number of the 3,000 or so Arab guerrillas captured over many years of border war-

Though assured by the Western governments that there would be no separate deal, Israel was again under U.S. pressure to make a major concession—a concession its leaders saw as submission to blackmail. Not even the most incurable optimists in Washington saw much hope of luring Israel back to the peace table so long as this volatile situation-more dangerous, some thought, than before the peace initiativeprevailed.

Which was just the situation the hijackers had sought to

The Popular Front's big day last Sunday began with failure. Shortly after El Al's Flight 219 from Tel Aviv to New York was airborne from Amsterdam, a man who had got on at the stopover lunged out of his seat, pistol in hand, crying "Yallah!" -Arabic for "Come on!"-and was followed by a girl holding two grenades.

Over in Minutes

At about the same time, TWA's Flight 741, a 707 on a round-the-world flight, was hijacked after taking off from In minutes the hijack attempt Frankfurt, and passengers on Swissair's Flight 100, a DC-8 was over. Three soft pops—"they sounded like a cap on its way from Zurich to New gun," one passenger said—and York, heard a voice over the loudspeaker: "Good evening. the man was mortally shot by security guards, a part of the You now have a new captain."

Both planes were directed to the guerrillas' "Revolution Airport" outside Amman, a natural landing strip once used by the Royal Air Force for its World War II Spitfire fighters but considered hazardous for heavy craft. The U.S. planes were hijack-

Hijacked

"This is a good airport—we will fill it with airplanes, Allah willing," said a submachine guntoting young commando jubilantly. And on Wednesday morning the Front did add another sirplane to the strange tableau in the Jordanian desert a British Overseas Airways Cor-poration VC-10 hijacked en route from Bombay to London. Now the Front had leverage for its demand for the release of Miss Khaled as well.

Desert Drama

"Oh hear the voice of Palestine, of the Palestinians who want nothing but their own land," a commando spokesman his face swathed in his Arab headcloth, called out with the Arab relish for eloquence at the newspaper correspondents who had driven out from Amman and been permitted to approach the hijacked planes, but not too closely.

The Front's representatives were negotiating in Amman with André Rochat, a Swiss official of the International Red Cross acting as intermediary for the affected governments. Jordanian tanks held uncertain watch from the shallow desert hills, and the "voice of Palestine" was indeed being heard around the world.

"Savage and inhuman," commented United Nations Secretary General U Thant in a reaction that typified public opinion in non-Communist countries outside the Arab world. Dr. Habash, who was credited by his followers with organizing the hijackings and was reported by some to be in North Korea, by others in Baghdad—would doubtless have scorned such denunciation as a price worth paying for attract-ing world attention to the Palestinian cause. But even among the Arabs criticism was heard.

Cairo's influential dailies, Al Ahram and Al Akhbar, said attacks on international civil aviation created antipathy and "disgust." Hijackings "do; not serve the cause of the Pales-tinian people," said Kuwait's Ambassador to Washington, Talat al-Ghoussein, after he and diplomats of nine other Arab countries conferred with Secretary of State Rogers in Washington and promised to use what influence they could on the commandos. Iraq, the commando's most vociferous supporter in the Arab world, called on the Front to release the hostages on humanitarian grounds. The Security Council, with its Syrlan member assenting, called for "immediate re-lease of all passengers and

Front Riding High

What effect the importunings of even fellow Arabs had on the Front's shadowy second-string leaders in their dusty little office building in downtown Amman was difficult to tell. Like their mentor, Dr. Habash, a Christian who headed a team of nuns in an Amnian clinic for the poor before throwing in with the fedayeen, the 1,800 or so members of the Popular Front are bourgeois intellectuals of Marxist-Moolst persuasioo who are even more contemptuous of Arah "reactionaries" than Western "capitalists." And, as their blowing up of the planes yesterday suggested, the Front's militants were riding

In the intermittent fighting that has shaken Jordan ever since King Hussein accepted a cease-fire that the commandos -all the commandos, including the largest and most "moderate," el-Fatali-opposed, the Front, with its greater fervor and discipline, has been gaining strength within the guerrilla movement. In Amman, where street fighting between guerrillas and the Jordanian Army approached civil-war proportions last week, a taxi driver told a Western correspondent that after the hijacking coup "everybody is Habash now." In Beirut and other Arab capitals, correspondents reported widespread feelings of pride in the Front's skill, defiance and clan.

Speaking of the 1.5 million Palestinian refugees who feel they were driven from their homeland in the 1948 and 1967 wars, Dr. Habash in his interview last summer sald, "We force people to ask what is going on, and so they get to know our tragic situation." Perhaps the most fundamental aspect of last week's drama was that the commandos, in their ruthless way, gave tongue to a massive despair that any Mideast peace move will have to recognize.

The Police: A Target for Blacks' Frustrations—and Their Guns

By Robert C. Maynard

CHICAGO (WP). - America has again escaped a sumner without the wholesale thetto-burnings of earlier years. But the hot months this year have produced grim evidence hat the racial tension long aferupting in a new and more virulent strain—guerrilla warfare between young blacks and riots of the sixtles, today's perhaps, or a black organiza-tion's office. But they are far more lethal, 'x there is a mutual hatred now, and a greater willingness on both sides to use guns. For example:

At a Chicago housing project, two white policemen whose mission was making friends with young blacks were crossing a baseball field when two rifle shots rang out. The policemen fell, mortally wounded, recover the bodies they were pinned down by the sharp-

• In a restless Houston lun, the leader of a Black Panther-style group was cross-ing a street where five white nen on a church roof were watching for snipers. Two quick shots by the police and companion wounded.

Appears to Be War

"What appears to be happening is a war, a fend between the white police and residents of the hisck community." Temarks Dr. John P. Spiegel of the Lemberg Center on the Study of Violence. "Neither side seems willing to negotiate." These kids have to go their route now, because my genera-tion tried and we falled," says Timothy Holland, a black so ciologist in New Bedford, Mass. His 15-year-old daughter was wounded when, during a summer disorder there, a shotgun was fired from a car-load of whites, killing a black youth (Four white youths have been charged with murder.).

"We said we could make the eystem work, and it failed us and failed our children," Mr. Holland says. "So now they are doing it their way."

The "system" of institutionalized racism as viewed by many hold the things they wantjustice, a black identity. Having registed their parents' attempts to change it from withm, they feel the system must be overthrown from without-and the police are its guardians.

Police Ready

The police-are ready. After an officer was killed in Phi-ladelphia, allegedly by "black revolutionaries," Police Commissioner Frank Rizzo a challenge:

"If they had any guts they would call me and set a showdown ... we'll even give them odds on it. We'll send out fewer people (than they do) with fewer weapons

The hlacks are ready. After the black leader's death in Houston, posters went on sale bearing his picture with the legend, "You can kill a revolutionary, but you can't kill the revolution." And one of the youths at their "information center" declared, "We are winning more of the people every day and they can't stop ns, no matter how hard they try." In visits to cities across the country, a reporter finds some lements in common: · More than ever, the white policeman feels threatened and embattled. As virtually the only

Older blacks who still have faith in the orderly political process worry that the young will bring down white retaliation upon the entire black community. The young seem hent on suicide, these elders

The combination of persistent failure in school, and nothing to do outside of it, leaves Chicago black youth no choice but to "hang with the gangs and hustle any way you can," as Charles Davis, 17, describes it. Mr. Davis was mourning the death, three days earlier, of a money is still being made. Whether the festivals as such are on the way out, as some are lamenting, the ingredients that made them such attractive in vestments are as constant as ever. Music is still the medium for America's affluent youth.

"Somebody said to me, who was involved in the operation; that it was an awful lot easier than trying to promote a Broadway show," said Aaron Ment, a lawyer, who represented the promoters of the Powder Ridge Festival at Middlefield, Conn., earlier this month.

"The money wasn't in the gate receipts, although they might collect a million. The money was in records the con-cessions and the like."

Up to $10 Million

"And if it went well and got a name, then you would have Powder Ridge sweat shirts and Powder Ridge T-shirts to sell. They were talking about $5 or $10 million.

Powder Ridge is not the only case where a million-dollar venture with the prospects of far greater profits, has wound up in a tangle of accusations and recriminations. The tangle is becoming standard.

In the aftermath of the fiascoes, the blame invariably is being placed on fly-by-night promoters. But that is an oversimplification

Artists, agents, managers and a host of others interested in turning an easy dollar are all involved. Their target is clear: a vast youth subculture, careful-ly nurtured by fact and fiction into an immense market. Everywhere, the pitch is the

What they don't realize is that the artists, along with others, are receiving huge sums even if the festival is canceled and that they are now sharing in the subsidiary rights, too, if

The people who have escapbeing discredited are the performers," says one festival promoter. They're singing about love and peace and life. But backstage, before they go on, they're screaming that they won't appear until they get that certified check in their hands. These guys have managers. The menagers are businessmen. They

Performers Costlier

Since Woodstock, the price for performers has risen drama-tically. Today's range is from a low of $500 for an act to a reported $100,000 commanded by such a group as the Rolling

At their best, the festivals are successful commercial ventures that render an entertainment service; at worst, they cruelly and cynically exploit the youth, who believe them to be a rare human experience.

No matter what the reality may be, that last impression is ryasive. The Woodstock Festival has assumed an aura that it never deserved. Even now you can read accounts feeding the myth that Woodstock, unlike others, "just happened," that it was never supposed to be a money-making operation.

"Woodstock was primarily an investment for me," says John Roberts, one of the original four promoters of Woodstock (and one of those whom Artie Kornfeld

Mr. Roberts, who inherited a million dollars, went on to say: "An alarmingly large number of unscrupulous and very opportunistic people, very con-versant in the lingo and love and good vibrations, are equally adept at slipping the dagger in your back. They have these beatific looks and wear love beads, but they aren't all lovely.

There's a mythology about this business. There's an incredible amount of greed, which, surprisingly, is not tempered by some basic business intelligence. They profess to be members of the new cult love generation—but in reality they are often out for their own interests."

Before the festival, Mr. Roberts says, members of the underground press and "Yipple" leader Abbie Holiman ap-proached them. "What they wanted was money so they wouldn't disrupt the festival," Mr. Roberts states. They pro-fessed to be terribly concerned about the abuse of the 'street people.' They wanted us to give them tickets and transportation and money. We said 'no.'

"But, as a face-saving gesture for us, we incorporated them into our peace-keeping force. You have to face the realization that these people have power and you have to deal

Drugs Proliferate

Such charges have been made by others involved with festivals. Another problem that has worsened since Woodstock is the extent of drug selling that has afflicted virtually every festival planned this summer. At Powder Ridge, for example, one man who was arrested on possession of narcotics charges had $13,000 in cash with him, plus a supply of drugs.

Because Woodstock has be-come so legendary, it is often assumed that it was the pioneer for the other festivals. It wasn't. The first was held in wasn. The list was heat in June, 1967, at Monterey, Calif. Movie and recording rights flowed out of that one, too, and the phenomenon was

For the company just beginning to expand internationally, the Continental network can be equally important.

The people who staff our local facilities know their countries. They know the people who make things happen. And they can provide welcome assistance to the company unfamiliar with a new and foreign business environment.

That's the multinational bank. For the multinational company. Or the company that would like to be.

It's what you'd expect from one of the world's great banks.

Wanted: World Policemen

The United States has frequently been accused of seeking to be a global policeman. This specific accusation is silly, since America has certainly since the departure of John Foster Dulles, been very careful to limit its active interpositions to certain areas and in much of the rest of the world to speak softly. But the disruption of world travel routes by the Palestinian guerrillas has, in addition, made it painfully apparent that the world has no policeman at all,

It has a court, to be sure, and at least the rudiments of law. And there is a world organization that is supposed to represent the compined authority of virtually all the nations, and above all, to keep the peace. But the court's writs clearly do not run in Jordan, or in the skies: such law as exists is, when not inapplicable, unenforceable, and the world organization is reduced to solemn pronouncements that may possibly have tempered the fates of some of those offended against, but cortainly has not punished the offenders.

This half-ludicrous situation which has reduced most of the civilized world to impotence did not spring up overnight. In an article in the New Yorker, Hannah Arendt, discussing civil disobedience in the United States, points out quite accurately that it is not the disobedient persons who are reducing respect for the law. The disrespect really stems from "a disastrous erosion of police competence and power," and it may be said that "the impotence of institutional power has persuaded many otherwise complacent people of the logitimacy of civil disobedience.

There is an analogy here to the world's situation. The "institutional power" of the United Nations has neither redressed the legitimate grievances which might justify war, nor prevented war itself. And the radicals rely on those grievances and those wars for justification of their acts against the most elementary rights of persons who are not responsible for the grievances nor engaged in the wars.

It can be argued that unlike a nation, which assumes some kind of universal consensus for its very existence, the United Nations is a shaky agglomeration of many peoples and many points of view. But in fact, this is also true of nations; to give equal validity to every course of action or inaction which may be held by overy citizen is mere anarchy. And to search out the "deeper causes" for every infraction of the social bond may be, as Hannah Arendt argues, a "technique of evasion."

In other words, unless the responsible nations stir themselves for self-protection ageinst irresponsible, even whon the latter have arguments on their side (they always have arguments), the existing international consensus, which defines combetants and non-combatants, and lays down certain minimal rules for conduct toward each class, can dissolve altogether.

The advantages of winning a "strategic" hold on the sympathies of one contestant or another, the ideological excuses for favoring one group over another, the luxury of "upderstanding" why a man murders his fellow man may have intellectual validity (and only may do so), but they become evasions of a common responsibility if they inhibit action to keep the world's none-tooadequate machinery for feeding and clothing humanity from breaking down. The world needs policemen, if law, social justice, equity and all the goals toward which people strive are to have any meaning.

Mideast Missile Madness

While the lawless and inhuman acts of Palestinian extremists draw the censure of a horrified world, the Soviet Union and Egypt are compounding the damage to their own credibility, to the prospect for a Mideast settlement and to the future willingness of others to enter agreements with them by claiming that Egypt's massive missile buildup in the Suez area was permitted by the language of the standstill cease-fire pact.

The report now that these movements have included a few SAM-3 low-altitude antiaircraft missiles—which are entirely manned by Soviet military personneloffers further evidence of Moscow's complicity in Egypt's SAM-2 violations. It also heightens the danger of direct Soviet involvement in combat from the first hour of a truce breakdown.

The State Department, by releasing the language of the cease-fire accord, has completely discredited the Egyptian thesis, supported by Moscow, that "redeployment" of missiles already within the truce zone and repair of damaged revetments are permitted by the cease-fire agreement. The Soviet-Egyptian claim, if valid, might have offered some flimsy cover to the violations, which. U-2 reconnaissance shows, go far beyond ench activities. But the truco accord in fact provides that "both sides will refrain from changing the military status quo' in the Suez Zone. It forbids either side to "introduce or construct" new military installations and limits maintenance of existing installations to "their present sites and positions."

Grave as are the immediate local consequences of the missile violations, even more serious are the bald-faced efforts to justify—rather than rectify—those violations. They bring into question the utility of the "era of negotiations" predicted by President Nixon. Chances for East-West agreements to limit strategic arms, to revise European security arrangements and to reduce NATO and Warsaw Pact forces undoubtedly have been impaired by this glaring display of Soviet bad faith.

It is difficult to see how Russia's real interests can be served by this Mideast missile madness. The consequences for Egypt could be even more disagreeable.

Israel is in possession of huge buffer territories-occupied while winning the war Egypt provoked in 1967—that provide far more defensible borders than those it can obtain from peace negotiations. Egypt's central objective in the projected negotiations is to get Israel to withdraw from the bulk of those territories. Withdrawal is more likely to be impeded than encouraged by threats, a buildup of military power and continued violations of the standstill cease-fire.

The fundamental interests of Egypt and the Soviet Union now lie in abandoning preposterous protexts and rectifying their truce violations. The essential task of negotiating a settlement cannot be expected to make any headway during a breakdown of the standstill agreement designed to set those negotiations in motion.

International Opinion

The Jordan Desert Drama One thing the Arab guerrillas, and notably the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, have certainly achieved, and that is irreparable damage to their own cause. Many, probably the majority, of those who, like this newspaper, are broadly in sympathy with Israel, have realized that the tides of history have caused suffering and injustice to thousands of Arabs. But to behave like savages is not the way to bring about justice and amelioration of their lot; it is merely to invite the civilized world to treat them as savages and to insure that all eympathy for their grievances evaporatee totally. If among all nations, whatever their interests and their objectives, there grows a determination that never again shall a small band of cutlaws hold them to ransom and rob thom of the power of taking their own decisions, then indeed out of evil may come at last some good.

-From the Sunday Telegraph (London).

The PFLP has only 2,000 members. If should not be capable of gaining ascendancy over the rest of the Arab world and smashing the possibility of a settlement. Unless Arab governments now stand up to the Popular Front they can be absolutely certain of being accomplices in its immediate triumph—the end, probably for many years, of movement toward peace.

-From the Sunday Times (London).

Once again one yields to blackmail. To tell the truth, we do not see how the governments could have acted differently. The possibility of a surprise attack on "the airport of the revolution" was indeed contemplated in Washington, but there was every reason to fear that in such an event the commandos would carry out their criminal threat of destroying the planes and killing the passengers. International complications were foreseeable since the Soviets insisted in the Security Council that the moans used for liberating the passengers ehould remain within the framework of legality. Only King Hussein could have undertaken a forcible action, with the same risks for the prisoners, And the confusion that currently prevails in Amman is not of a nature to prompt the Jordanian sovereign to seek further motives for complications with the Palestinian organizations.

PARIS-The dead are always quickly forgotten in France—those who have been cut off by violence, as well as those who are carried off by disease. The late President Carnot is a striking illustration of this fect. It is little more than a year since he was murdered. Is it too much to hope that somehow the thoughtful minds in these two great intellectual and political institutions, now in such terrible trouble and confusion, can lift the major problems of human life—the control of war, population, poverty, ignorance and pollution—back into the headines where at least they may revive serious discussion of the main threats to the human family?

Probably it is saking too much, But it is fairly clear, as H. G. By C. L. Sulzberger

NEW YORK—By their skyjack-ing operations Arab guerrillas have succeeded in dramatizing "Palestine" as a code word representing a concatenation of headlines of the last few days. War aches and potential cleavage that may soon be reflected by new diffloulties in an uneasy American

This is not the primary intention of the little group of activists of the fractional Popular Front which arranged the air piracies. But it is the primary intention China, which sees in Middle East anarchy an admirable chance to perplex its principal enemies. the United States and the Soviet Union.

Peking is convinced Washington pense. There is certainly an apparent effort by the two super-powers to reduce the cost of armsments, to ease tensions in Europo. to pull back from the brink of war in the Middle East and (for the U.S.A.) to work out a Southeast Asia settlement.

China's policy is resolutely opposed to each of these sims. Moreover, its perceptive revolutionary leaders, having already seen what the Vietnam war produced in weakening the American social structure, obviously hope that Palestine chaos may accelerate

The process has been visible for some time. Ten months ago (Nov. 8, 1969) I wrote: "'Vietnam' has been the code word for the formidable array of troubles that has weakened the United States during the past five years. 'Palestine' may be the code word symbolizing other agonies during the next five years. Some members of the Middle-Aged Left, refusing to acknowledge that they might be growing old or stodgy, too often hitch thickening hips and wittingly dance to the tune of the Picd Piper of Peking. a distinction. If there is any yield with regard to classification of citizens, pressure will obviously be intensified in the future, either because the guerrillas themselves see a chance to exploit divisions inside a conntry they regard as Israel's mainstay or because Peking suggests there were at least hints of such

There is nothing in the least fortuitous about this development. Activist violence has long been encouraged by China's formidable propaganda apparatus, an apparatus which now advises guerrilles: "The prospects of revolution are. Chile's 'Communist' Regime

This is a common view and it has a certain shock value. But it reflects the world, and the Communism, of the Stalin age rather than of today. What the editorial should have referred to was not a "Communist" ; administration, or leader, but a "Marrist." There is a vast difference today.

Back in 1848 Karl Mark and Priedrich Engels wrote "The Communist Manifesto," which is the bedrock for a vast subsequent array of political thinkers and activists who have variously labeled them-selves Communist Socialist, Marxist, Maoist, Trotskylte and what not. The burden of Marx was that private property and ownership was the root of all evil.

Theory turned to practice when Lenin selsed control of Russia and turned it into the Soviet Union. Still, orthodox Communists (and that means those who adhere to the Soviet brand) have an elaborate ricual of moving by stages to full Communism, which is why, for ex-ample, they so often speak of the "Socialist states" of Eastern Eu-rope which have yet to earn full marks of progress toward Utopia.

Not Neat Anymore

The "Communist bloe" of the 1950s is not the neat package it used to be. In 1948, Tito's Yugoslavia defied Moscow and in the 50s, we now know, the Chinese under Mao Tse-tung began their breaksway. "Polycentrism" was the term applied by Italian Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti. Another was "separate roads to socialism."

In the current era there are a plethors of regimes paying some form of bomage to Marxism. A couple call themselves "people's republics"—South Yemen and the Congo whose capital is Brazzaville. Castro's Cuba may be tied militarily to Moscow but it has never been recognized as a member of the Socialist bloc."

> > A Mixed Bag

Here at home we have all sorte of individuals and groups black and white, young and old-that claim to be Marxist, beginning with the old Communist party and the Socialist Workers party. Much of the rhetoric of young revolutionaries here and in other free nations is full of the verbiage of Marx, usually mixed with that of Castro, Che Guevara and a host of others.

The central theme, springing from their reading of Marx (though sometimes it seems that some of them haven't read very deeply) is that the "masses" are being economically exploited by the "monopolists." Often they have a case.

The fact is that, whereas the great ideological gulf between the superpowers, the U.S. and the U.S.S.R., is generally stated as capitalism vs. socialism, the real difference relates to the freedom of their citizens.

This is not to accept the theory of "convergence" of Soviet and American societies; far from it. It is true that the mixed economy, so common in many non-Communist nations, is more and more a fact of American life, however powerful "capitalism" remains.

The true point of judgment is freedom of the individual. A: Eastern Europe has shown, once behind the Iron Curtain, freedom disappears. Today's collection of "Marxist" states, or Marxist leaders, includes all sorts of variations and some of them seem no more than yet another search for the best

Appeasement is no bargain, whether it be to a Hitler or to Arab guerrilla-pirates. There is only one way to deal with these vermin: Hunt them down relentlessly and exterminate them utterly. New Issues Quoted at Premium; Market Retains Its New Optimism

By Condon Bakstansky

PARIS, Sept. 13.-With three new U.S. straight dollar debts priced last week and immediately going to a premium in first trades, the Eurobond-mar-ket retained its new-found opti-

The new issues are two from Esso, $30 million of 8 3/4 percent five-year notes and $20 million of 9 percent 15-year debentures, priced at par, and a $15 million, ten-year flotation from Cabot Corp, with a coupon of 9 1/2 per cent priced at 99. First indicative bids for all three were about a quarter-point over issue prices.

The dollar side thus cleared, Hawker Siddeley promptly step-ped up with plans for a fiveyear, $15 million issue with the coupon expected to be 9 per-cent. Prising is expected within

But the real spurt to issuing activity remains on the dautsche mark side. Three Firmish companies together an-nounced a 60 million DM, 15year flotation with a coupon of 8 1/2 percent expected and Norges Kommunalbank of Oslo has a 50 million DM, 8 1/2 percent, 15-year issue plan.

Those two bring total DM flotations on the public market in September to 290 million DM, with persistetnt rumors that more are on the way. And the month is still young

The West Germans have apparently been adjusting their queue system to take into consideration an increasing inflow of speculative capital. The queue had been holding DM issues to around 200 million DM monthly, regularly spaced out, but the emberrasment of reserve riches is apparently forcing a freer export of capi-

The most interesting issue to market observers, however, is a convertible 15-year, 7 1/2 percent "private placement" from Kraftco of 100 million DM announced last week.

The conversion price will be set at 10 percent over the average closing price of Krafteo stock in the 21 trading days preceding Sept. 18. It is the first U.S. convertible since March and perhaps the first non-dollar U.S. convertible. Also, the manner of selling it was a bit unusual—with managers Deutsche Bank and Goldman Sachs taking up the whole issue and reoffering it to a "limited number" of European banks. The definition of "pri-vate placement" is highly flexible in the Eurobond market, but the more usual selling sys-tem is for the invited partici-pants to bid directly for a share in the issue.

Finally, with the New York stock market apparently on its way up again, or at least out of the hear market woods, there has been some hope that someone would test the climate for funding in that ares. Now the problem is how to read the Kraftco experience-very successful from all reports—in terms of the public market based on individuals rather than banks or institutions.

The denomination of a U.S. convertible in deutsche marks rather than dollars further hampers this analysis, as does the fact that no U.S. or U.S.-

August Optimism Turns to September Doubt As Strains Surface in Business, Foreign Ties

By Thomas E. Mullaney

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT). -The great optimism that per-meated the investment world in August seems to be withering somewhat at the midpoint of September as new strains and uncertainties begin to surface in the realm of business, finance and international rela-

The chord of confidence that had been rising in the securities markets was muted considersbly last week by fears of a renewed upsurge in inflation, concern over the recuperative power of the sconomy, the threats of work stoppages in the cotomotive and railroad industries, and worry over the possible implications of the eir-plane hijackings in the Middle

It was an atmosphere that could hardly be expected to buoy the spirits of businessmen and the levels of stock and bond prices, and, of course, it did not. Thus, the financial markets were knocked off balance slightly, but they were not seriously upset.

Perhaps temporarily, the stock and bond markets re-versed course and turned moderately downward after their great summer rallies. Few observers, however, were ready to procisim that the pendulum was about to swing decidedly in the opposite direction. It may have been merely a week for pausing, new assessments and profit-taking.

Those who are optimistic about the stock market's prospects are basing their exu-berant sentiments on the belief that the 1969-70 business recession has now passed by with only a mild impact and that improved corporate profits, lower interest rates and easier money conditions will be forth-coming fairly soon.

Surge of Trading The bulls have also been encouraged by the recent surge of trading volume, particularly when the market was rising. There have been indications that cash-heavy financial institutions have been gingerly re-turning to a more active role on the buying side.

"The key to the stock market's course," said one invest-orent analyst, "still lies in the performance of the bond market. If the expected cut in the prime rate comes sometime

The Over-the-Counter market did somewhat better as pin-pointed in the movement of the National Quotation Bureau's index of 35 industrial issues which climbed 9,24 points and closed on Friday at 323.37. Among the stronger counter issues this week, Tecumseh Products seared 13, Raychem gained 13 1/2, Reliance Universal rose 5, Pier 1 Imports, Inc. gained 2 7.8, Kalvar tacked on 1 1/4, the stock market."

It may well be that the bear market that began late in 1968 came to a close at the end of May this year with its 36 percent drop to the 631 area of the Dow Jones industrial stock average. But few analysis are ready to predict that a new bull market is about to start. Since reaching its low point lu the apring, the market recovered about 142 points, or 22 percent, by last Tuesday, bot then it fell back somewhat on profit-taking inspired by the domestic and international uncertainties. While the stock market was laboring rather uncertainly in last week's post Labor Day boliday trading the bond market was somewhat more decisive, with interest rates in all sectors higher and prices lower. High-Quality Bond Up

A high-quality utility bond was priced to yield 8.93 percent last week, up from 8.80 percent on a similar issue the week before. Between mid-June and early August, yields had moved down from a peak of 9.50 percent to 8.65 percent, but have now retraced about one-third of the drop, Similarly, in the tax-exempt bond market, interest rates declined from 7.03 percent in mid-June to 6.07 percent at the end of August and are now back to 6.30 percent, as measured by the bond buyer index. This week should be a significant one for the credit markets, providing a clue on how the Fed intends to push interest rates during the next (Continued on Page 11, Col. 4)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (WP).—The International Monetary Fund today took a tentative, limited, but important step toward introducing more flexibility into the system of exchange rates that govern the price of one national currency in terms of another, After more than a year's study, the IMF's executive directors, while rejecting major changes in the existing fixed-rate system initiated a discussion of three methods that could change the value of currencies fairly frequently, thus avoiding major upheavals typical of the exchange-rate crises of recent years.

Under the current system, IMF members agree to accept a Under the current system, last memoers agree to accept a certain limitation on their freedom to shift their currency values, and in any event, not to propose changes except to curect a "fundamental disequilibrium." Par values are expressed, usually in terms of the U.S. dollar as a common denominator.

The report has been eagerly awaited, with—in some quarters—

a considerable degree of trepidation. Currency markets in Europe were nervous last week, fearful that this week's annual IMP meeting at Copenhagen might change the rules although action that quickly was never a realistic possibility.

As is often the case, the product of the executive directors represented a compromise. The Germans, Italians, and some U.S. officials wanted to go much further. Prance ler, the opposition, supported by other Continental powers.

Supported by other Continents: powers.

U.S. Under Secretary of the Treasury Paul A. Volcker spoke approvingly of the report as "useful." His told a press conference that "it will do a lot to clarify thinking in an area which is murky

Mr. Veloker gave a special blessing to the report's discussion of the so-called "transitional float," as used by Germany last year. Whether or not the IMP eventually decides to legalize such temporary departures from parity, Mr. Velcker made clear that the United States thinks the Fund might adopt a tolerant attitude toward the practice.

The Treasury official also specifically endorsed the report's rejection of the automatic "crawling peg" as among unacceptably drastic reforms. "We're not talking about a revolution here," Mr.

The IMP directors did not enderse any specific method for new flexibility (although they flatly rejected dramatic changes]. Instead, they tossed the ball to the annual meeting in a way which ensures a lively discussion of the issue.

Basically, the question is whether the existing par value system, created at Bretton Woods in 1946, has been too rigid, preventing smooth adjustments when one currency gats out of line with another. Speculation and near-panic, for axample, seized money markets when Britain was forced to devalue the pound in 1967, and again last year, when French and German money rates needed

In recent years, proposed reforms have focused on: · Freely floating exchange rates, in which there would be

• Permission for rates to vary widely around parity in actual ctions—say 5 percent or more on each side-

1 percent as at present. The "crawling" or automatic peg, under which rates would be adjusted at fixed intervals according to some pre-determined

The IMF directors barred these "alternatives" to the current system, but turned their attention to ways "which would facilitate speedier response to an emerging or imminent fundamental disequilibrium.

The directors then outlined three areas that might promote "the most smooth and effective operation" of the existing system: • Prompt adjustment of parities in appropriate cases. In great detail, the report made clear that the condition of "fundamental disequilibrium" that justifies a change in par values is much more dly defined than just a balance of payments problem. It "is related to the general condition of the member's economy..."
To encourage prompt responses to smaller changes in parity than have been proposed in the past, the directors suggested (without endorsing) a "B and 10" formula: any country could change its rate by 3 percent in any one-year period, and by no more than 10 percent in five years without asking the Fund's permission.

● A slight widening in the margins around parity—While opposing "a substantial" widening of permitted margins, the directors discussed changing the 1 percent limit to 2 percent "or at the most 2 percent," acknowledging that they were not sure whether the advantages would outweigh the disadvantages.

Temporary deviation from par value obligations-The direcreised the question of legalizing the temporary or transitional "float" of rates, as undertaken without sanction last year by West Germany and currently by Canada, Again, the directors said they had "not come to a final view." But if there were to be a need for some country soon to change its par value, it could "float" the rate, suggesting that the IMF report had given that technique an indirect blessing.

The ceotious and probing nature of the IMP directors' report will be disappointing to advocates of more encompassing reforms.

But the very publication of the report can be considered a positive step forward; at a minimum, it opens the door instead of slamming it shut on continued discussion of the problem, and more or less assures that the Copenhagen meeting will authorize further and possibly more specific probes into the question.

Perhaps more significant than the details of the executive directors' report is the broad emphasis on the need to change par values—under existing rules—as promptly as possible where action is indicated. The report goes out of its way to suggest that "fundamental disequilibrium," which triggers a change under IMF rules, can cover a variety of sins.

"The term fundamental disequilibrium" is not defined in the articles end the Fund has never ettempted to formulate a definition," the report says. It evolds that task in this document as well, but devotes several hundred words to an exploration of the

The net conclusion is that "the criterion of fundamental disequilibrium is not confined to the occurrence of an overt disequilibrium in the balance of payments. The criterion can also relate to the performance of the domestic economy, to the pur-poses of the Fund, and to the policies and policy preferences of its members. Because of the important role that this concept plays in the par value system, the Fund will continue to study the statistical and other elements to be taken into account in the exercise of judgment with respect to the presence and magnitude of fundamental disequilibria."

Americans Seeking Capital From Europe

By Clyde H. Farnsworth PARIS (NYT) .- To alleviate the financial squeeze in domestic operations, American companies have been tapping European resources to an un-paralleled extent. This has brought them into occasional conflict with European author-

Home offices, bankers report, have been demanding repairistion of a large portion, in some cases all, of the profits of their robust European subsidiaries.

In addition, subsidiaries have been urged to borrow extensively. While few companies admit it, some of this borrowed money has been moving to the United States as well.

In contrast to conditions in the United States, European economic setivity has been exceptionally strong this year. This has meant good profits for many American subsidiaries, particularly those in high-technology fields where competition is not so keen, and has encouraged the repairiation trend

Economizing On Imported Scotch

By Werner Bamberger

VEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYT). -More and more Americans who enjoy Scotch whisky ere discovering the economy that comes from importing it in the most megnificent of all magnum bottles—a 5,250-galion container.

Since the bulk method began in 1960, its share has risen to nearly 30 percent of the total In the first seven menths of 1970, 5 million gallons crossed the Atlantic in bulk to 11 million in the original Scottish batiles. To the consumer, a fifth of locally-bottled Scotch costs about $5, compared with for a popular bottled-in-Scotland brand. For the liquor industry, the strings of the bulk method are more than just the simplicity of moving a special hauid conteiner by truck from highland distiller; to containerport and leading it on ship. The Scotch crosses the Atlantic in concenmted form, with an alcoholic content as high as 65 percent by volume. Distilled water is added when the Scotch is bottied here to reduce the alcoholic content to 40 or 43 percent, which is 80 or 85 percent proof in liquor-industry terms.

The savings on the hasis of reduced weight for the concentrated Scotch are exceeded by the savings in federal import taxes here. The tax rate is substantially lower for liquor that enters the country at a concentration of 100 proof or

Sources in the liquor trade say that bulk shipment has branched out from Scotland to France: One of every ten bottles of Cognac sold in this country represents local bottling of a bulk import. Canadian whiskey does not have to cross the Atlantic to reach the American market, but it, 100, is traveling here in bulk. Tankloeds trucked in from Canadian distilleries in the same high-proof form get the same tax and shipping advantages as the seaborne containers. There are Americans who export as well as import liquor. There is already a market in West Germany and Australia for American corn likker that has gone to finishing school and emerged as Bourbon.

Central banks have been concerned over the rising debt-toequity ratio of some American subsidiaries. In some cases they have sought to prevent new

An American electronics company, employing 1,500 persons in France, ran into this problem with the Bank of France and reacted sharply, according to banking sources.

In effect, it delivered an ultimatum: authorization of the loan or removal of the company's activities to another country. The central bank cem-

American companies rarely report publicly on the profitability of their subsidiaries, but bankers said that electronics companies have been doing particularly well this year. Texas Instruments and Motorola are among those said to be showing good results in France.

Autos Have Rougher Ride The American automobile subsidiaries have had a rougher ride. Competition with European manufacturers is tough. Labor troubles have hit operations in Britain. Tighter instaliment credit terms in several countries, imposed to curb consumption in the generalized fight against inflation, have cut

According to forecasts made by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. European economic growth is expected to taper off in the second half of this year and through the first half of

The OECD's economic staff projected a decline (adjusted for price changes; from 6 1/3 percent growth in the first half of 1970 to 5 3/4 percent in the second half.

In the United States, output ectually fell in the first half by around 1 1/2 percent and expected to rise in the second helf by 2 percent. Next year growth in the United States is seen approaching 4 percent, against 5 percent Behind the wide gap in economie performance this year, economists explain, is the longer adjustment the United States has had to make to restrain Smaller Labor Reserve

The United States is now described as "more advanced" in its anti-inflation battle, at the expense of large unused capacity and more than 5 percent unemployed. European companies are still operating at near capacity with much lower jobless figures. Britain is the only European country where unemployment has been rising rapidiy in recent months. European countries have a smaller reserve of labor than the United States and traditionally import workers from the poorer countries. There are now about two million foreign workers in Germany, Europe's strongest economic power.

While American companies have brought widely acknowledged benefits to Europe such as employment in depressed regious and a technological spillout. Europeans are increasingly sensitive to the amount of influence over their economic activities that has been transferred to head offices in the United States. One particularly touchy point is the whip hand the Americans have had in the European capital market.

In an acid commentary on American investments, the Executive Commission of the Suropean Economic Community has said: 'In addition to their market, their workers end their administrators (at least to a certain level), the European countries are at the same time bringing their savings to the American investor." American companies raised more than $400 million in Europe by selling bonds in the first half of this year. Some observers suspect that an even lerger amount was raised in the private placement of notes with European banks.

In the EEC commission study. it was pointed out that European lending to American companies had rocketed from $447 million in 1959 to $2,6 billion

Until recently European banks have been only too happy to make loans to American com-panies. What changed the climate was the failure of the Penn Central railroad, bringing in its wake a much harder look at all balance sheets. Only a month before the Penn Central declared bankruptcy, it had placed $20 million of its notes with a group of small Swiss

As the debt ratios of American subsidiaries have risen, several large American corporations, it was learned, are coosidering issuing new shares and selling them in Europe. In making it easier for the average European investor to own American shares, the com-panies hope to widen their time tempering European critics. Reports issued during the week contained little reason for great optimism about the eco-nomic situation. A government equity base while at the same

(Continued from Page 9) linked institution was offered the securities by the managers. The general direction and still causing debate. In some sectors, the Esso success is taken to mean that rates are finally headed down from the 9 1/2-percent-plus level of the summer. The virtual certainty an imminent cut in the prime rate at U.S. commercial banks, and the lagging demand from the United States reflecting the easier funding terms there serve as back-up to that argument. And on the secondary market, while trading volume has eased off, virtually all the 9 percent and up issues are trading at or over par, having adjusted to be in line with Esso. But others note that the Cabot issue, oven with a full halfpoint higher coupon, did come at a discount, to yield a shade nver 9 5/8 percent at maturity. And the Cabot issue is much more "of the market"—that is. a good credit but not of the triple-A Esso category.

On this side, two factors are noted. One is the overall hesitancy about the dollar, in some ways fed by the latest specularound of pressure on sterling, and interest in deutsche marks and guilders. The other is the continued questioning of the soundness of certain sectors of the U.S. economy, Last week's news that United California Bank in Basel lost an estimated $30 million in "unanthorized" commodity dealings did nothing to help this unmeasurable, but certainly noticeable, itchiness with parts of the American community.

What educated guesses on market direction edd up to is that whatever rejuvenation can expected, and where the vield level will settle at, may depend more heavily on flotations from Europeans than Americans—quite a switch for the historically U.S.-oriented

Hawker Siddeley, both because it is British at a time of sterling weakness end because it is in the troubled aircraft industry, may not be a pace-setting issue. But there is a feeling that, if the secondary market continues its firm trend, other European borrowers will lead the way.

In its annual report, the IMF said rather pointedly: "The domestic stabilization plan developed by the authorities (In the United States) early in 1969 is clearly behind schedule in slowing the pace of price and cost increases and, et the same time, it has had a more eevere impact on the real economy than was expected or haned for." The latest monetary statistics confirm the continuance of an aggressively easy money policy by the Federal Reserve that is related in part to seasonal considerations.

But many economists are asking how long the Fed can pursue such a policy, with the administration simultaneously running a heavy federal hudget deficit, without posing a serious threat of renewed inflation.

There has been significant improvement in the price indexes lately as well as greatly increased productivity. Cost-push infletion is continuing without eurcease, however, and the worry now is that prolonged resort to excessive monetary ease might revive the demand-pull inflation that subsided under the restraint of tight monetary and fiscal policy last year.

> New Strains Possible This would negate the benefits that came from the administration's engineered slowdown through fiscal and monetary actions. It would also impose new strains on the economy, which weathered the most severe shocks this year since the Great Depression

A preliminary report on August retail sales last Friday suggested that consumer caution was continuing last month. Business at the nation's stores last month dipped elightly from the July level to $30.6 billion, down about $100 million from the July volume and only 4 percent ahead of total sales in August of 1969. Had there not been substantial price increases in the meantime, the total would have showed a de-

More disturbing than any other economic developments last week was the warning on U.S. inflation sounded by the International Monetary Fund and the Federal Reserve's disclosure that the United States had switched from creditor to title was won this year by the United States for the first time since 1954, and the full account of the victory of the Dallas Aces in Stockholm is now available from the American Contract Bridge League, 125 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, Conn. 06830. The price for the 224-page book is $3, which represents magnificent value for the enthusiast. The book includes more than 300 deals, many of them analyzed in denth, full information about the contestants and their systems, and a history of the world championship.

The world team championship

There was less drama in this championship than in many previous years, largely because it was clear from the beginning that the Dallas Aces were the best players in the field. The diagramed deal is from the final against Taiwan, whose team distinguished itself by finishing in the runner-up spot for the second straight year.

Most players with the South hand would be content to bid three hearts on the second round, after one heart has been overcalled with one spade and both suits have been raised. But the American South was Bob Hamman, who is always an aggressive bidder. He jumped to four hearts, and probably regretted his enterprise when West led the spade king and the dummy appeared.

There were seven sure tricks available in the major suits, so three were needed from the minor suits. As West had made a vulnerable overcall, he could be expected to have at least one of the missing key cards, the diamond king and the club ace. If he beld both, there was a simple way to make 10 tricks.

DENNIS THE MENACE Tilllete.

If South had drawn trumps at once, he would have used up an important entry to dummy, So he ducked the opening spade lead, won the spade continua-tion and led the club seven. When West ducked, the declarer also ducked in dummy. East won with the ten, and whatever be played South was on the road to 10 tricks.

WHEN a NATO fleet exercise called "Mainbrace" in 1952 landed U.S. marines at Skagen, a bleak beachhead in Denmark, a local Danish newsman appeared from the mistshrouded village nearby and intercepted the first American newsman be saw. "Where's Hanson Baldwin?" he inquired. He wanted to interview the great Baldwin, Pulitzer prizewinner and long-time military editor of The New York Times. Told that Baldwin was not present, the Dane turned away disappointed, as if uninterested

Baldwin has been America's foremost military affairs writer for about 40 years. He began his military writing in 1927 after three years as a Naval officer following his graduation from Annapolis in 1924. His books, magazine articles and news reports have established his world-wide reputation as a military analyst and strategist.

His new book amply demonstrates that he deserves to wear the mantle of Alfred Thaver Mahan, the Navy's 19th century seapower strategist.

In it Baldwin proposes "an oceanic strategy, modified to permit continental intervention but at times and places of our own choosing [as] the concept best suited to America's tomorrows." Such a strategy would require superior strategic forces, air power, land and sea-based missiles, an improved merchant marine, carefully selected forward bases, naval task forces, long range bombers, tactical air and small airborne units at bases such as Hawaii or Guam, augmented by rapidmoving amphibious forces. Backing these up would be a central strategic reserve in the "Strategy for Tomorrow" appears to be heading in the same direction as the Nixon-Laird defense planning, which aims at cutting pyersess commit-ments and troop deployments. Like the Nixon Guam policy, Baldwin would maintain a low profile in Southeast Asia, He would pull oot one of the two U.S. divisions from South Korea. but not abrupily, and be would slash U.S. ground forces in Germany to 65-85,000 men, instead of the 250,000 now there.

Although Baldwin attributes our failure in Vietnam to policy recisions of the Kennedy-Johnson-McNamara leadership, be blames the government's overoptimism and deception for public disaffection with war, noting that the media share the blame." Baldwin denounces the "thirty-second pundits" of TV and the editorial writers and columnists... "particularly in The New York Times and The Washington Post, the beliwethers of American journalism-[who have] abandooed balance and fairness, lost perspective and accentuated the negative."

"In World War II the opposition of the left-wing inteller. tuals in the United States, who play such a large role in mold. ing public opinion, was transformed to support for the war when Hitler invaded Russia Baldwin writes. "And Hitler's persecution of the Jews unifer the important and influential Jewish community in Americaimportant alike in the publish ing and other communication-media, in economics and finance and in politics—against him.
But in Vietnam, "we were fight ing against the Communists, no with them; there was no over Jewish persecution; Jewisi emotions in the United State were focused not on Vietnan but on the plight of Israel i the Middle East."

Baldwin feels the Jewish pol tical influence has diverted U. policy from proper concern is its vital interests, which shoul be with the Arab states.

He discloses—and this is new if true—that "Israel is alread the world's sixth atomic powe she has nuclear weapons, or i! capability of assembling the quickly. Lionized Lines

By Russell Baker

LONDON.—A fascinating new book on the English queue -that is, a line of waiting people—has just been published here. It is called, "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Queues but Weren't Interested Enough to Ask."

Its author is Prof. P. S. Snapp, widely regarded as England's foremost queueologist. During the 11 years it took him to prepare and write his monumental work. Dr. Snapp stood in more than $75,000 queues and took aerial photographs of some 200,000 more.

From this mass of research. Snapp has produced the book all England dreads receiving in its Christmas etocking this December. There are, however, certain passages worth reading. Americans, who cannot abide having to stand in line for anything, will be interested in Snapp's assertion that there is no relationship whatever between the American line and its English counterpart, the queue. Whereas the English take pleasure in joining queues and pride themselves on the patience with which they wait their turn at the head of the line, he notes. Americans forced to stand in a line-at least in the United States—deeply despise themselves for submitting to what they regard as a demeaning position.

To join passively onto the end of a line that is moving toward say, a popular movie or a great state funeral, to quietly shuffle along until one works his way to the goal without making a single effort to cut the line denotes, among the Americans, a spineless character, the proressor says.

He has recorded a great many typical conversations among Americans participating in a cutting of the line, Most sound like this:

"Hey, whatsa idea cuttin' into the front of the line?" "Yeah, why can't you go to the back like everybody else?"
"Get the burn out of there!"

Line cutter: "Aaah, shut up!" In England, by contrast, cut-ting a queue is such a rate phenomenon that it is commented upon afterwards in the

No one would want his wife to meet the kind of Englishman who would cut a queue. Snapp fears, however, that traditional English respect for the queue may be turning into a sinister compulsion to queue.

After constructing a false queue of papier-maché figures outside a wrecked building. Snapp took hundreds of pictures of English persons who had sighted the queue two to three hlocks away and were heading purposefully to get at the end of the line. In most cases these persons admitted when interviewed that they did not know what the queue was leading to, and could not say what had * * *

Such persons are a tiny minority, of course, and as in the U.S., England has certain persons who never queue under any circumstances. Television celebrities, widely photographed politicians, the more egocentric millionaires, and persons of similar ilk never queue, since they do not want to be thought less important than Mrs. Jacqueline Onassis, who never queues.

In the U.S., however, the number of people who cannot queue is swelled vastly by the national assumption that walting in line shows that a person has no "influence. It is a dire thing in the U.S. to be thought to have no "influence," And so, at any given moment, as many as a million Americans. some of them persons of sub-stance, are busy trying to contrive ways to get into airplanes, into theaters, and up front at state funerals without having to shuffle along with the crowd.

Snapp, who has naturally run his research through computers, discovered that more than 200 million man-hours a day are wasted between New York and Washington alone by men trying to persuade flunkeys to beckon them to the heads of lines. "In America," the professor states, "standing is incom-patible with social standing."

A 7-Minute Epic Caps His Career

By John Walker

ONDON.-When Hugh Parker Guiler left the First National City Bank of New York after 29 years, having become an assistant vice-president, there was the usual farewell banquet and speeches. Finally, the guest of honor said a few words of his own. Not about money, but concerning the quality of imagination.

The successful banker, he said, was the man who sometimes sat back and thought of other matters. Who did not copy the bank president, dressing the same way, with the same kind of wife and children, living in the same sort of house in Westchester County.

Few, though, would have the imagination to follow the methods of Mr. Guiler, now a successful stockbroker. Away from Wall Street, he is better appreciated as Ian Hugo, the maker of a precious handful of extraordinary short films.

At the Edinburgh Film Festival this year, there was the first retrospective of Mr. Hugo's work, culminating in the. premiere of his latest, a seven-minute epic called "Apertura." The films are being shown in Paris (at the Palais de Chaillot cinematheque, today at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday at 10:30 p.m.), before being screened in London next month at the Institute of Contemporary Arts.

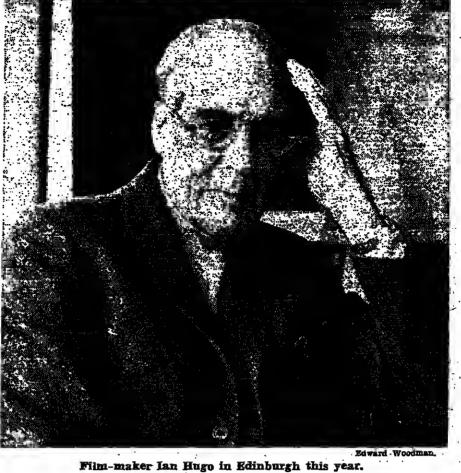

All of Mr. Hugo's films will be seen, from his first, "Ai-Ye," made 20 years ago, with its simple juxtaposition of images, to the more complex style, full of distortion and super-imposition; of his latest work. Until now, he has kept separate the different aspects of his life, fearing the scorn both of monomaniscal businessmen and artists.

Compunctions Gone

"I used to have considerable difficulty over my two lives," he says. "For the first time, they have coalesced and I have no compunction about talking. I've recently come to the conclusion that my principal difficulty lay in myself."

He is a tall man, 72 years old, with the scrupulous and reticent air of a scholar, who approaches everyone with a dignified courtesy. Descended on his father's side from a survivor of the Spanish Armada, washed ashore in Ireland, he was born in Boston but spent most of his formative yeare away from America.

It was in France, during the sur-realistic 1920s and 30s that he experienced the liberation that made him an artist. For there remains one side to his life that he will hardly discuss. Mr. Hugo is married to Anais Nin, most celebrated of modern diarists, and was part of her Paris, along with Henry Miller, Lewrence Durrell and a cast of thousands. In much the same manner. Miss Nin has removed all reference to him from her books. All he will say, under questioning, is: "She is highly

He admits her influence on his art. In her diary, Miss Nin wrote: "I do see my role as the eye, the third eye, the eye of vision." And Mr. Hugo says: "I start filming without any preconception, I see something that strikes me and I just go and film it,"

In those days, walking through Paris with a friend Jean Carteret-"His vision was even quicker than mine," wrote Miss Nin-Mr. Hugo felt that he was being taught to see. After becoming an engraver, he moved on to film as the medium for his art.

He says: "The motion picture is potentially the greatest of the arts because it unites them all; sound, movement and a luminosity of color that a painter could never achieve. By the use of super-imposition, I can transform the actual world and mix real colors."

It is a slow art, taking several years to produce one short film. For his nine-minute "Venice Etude No. 1," Mr. Hugo shot more than two hours of film and worked on it in time snatched at week-ends and holidays. Freedom from com-mercial pressure is important to him.

Bankers for Bankers

He says: "If you are dependent on your art, you end up by debasing it. I strive to be a pure artist. At the start, I regard the capital it takes to make a film as lost. It's the opposite principle to the one I learned as a banker.

"But the highest type of husinessman has the same quality of imagination as the artist. Like the men who are lawyers for lawyers, who solve complex problems so simply that you wonder why you never thought of the answer. Perhaps there should be bankers for bankers and so on.

Perhaps. Certainly Mr. Hugo is a filmmaker for film-makers,
